Brief Description & Objectives
In this activity, children create a memory box to reinforce the concepts presented in the text and support the development of their reading, writing, and speaking skills.

Grade Level(s)
K-6

Materials Needed
A cardboard box (a shoebox with a cover works great)
Magazines
Blank paper
Crayons, colored pencils, or markers
Stapler
Glue

Activities
- Remember Me? /¿Te acuerdas de mí?, may be read to small children or read by older children. A discussion should take place about the book regarding Alzheimer's and the concept of becoming someone else's memory. Children could talk about the kinds of things in their lives that they feel would be important to remember.
- Have the children look through magazines for various pictures of things that represent happy memories for them. They could also be instructed to go home and find small items that could be attached to pages that represent memories, such as baseball tickets or photographs.
- Have children glue the found pictures or items on to as many pages as are needed.
- On a separate piece of paper, children write about a few of the special memories that they have included in their memory boxes.
- Decorate the shoeboxes that the pages of memories will be stored in. Place memory pages in box.
- Children should be given time to share their boxes with either a partner, small group or the class.
